TRAID calls for proposals to fight global poverty

Deadline Tuesday June 23

Clothes recycling charity TRAIID is committing half a million pounds to fight global poverty in its tenth year, and is calling for proposals from organisations committed to sustainable development.

Maria Chenoweth-Casey TRAIID's Chief Executive said, "This is TRAIID's biggest ever annual spend on international development and I'm absolutely delighted to make this call for proposals. TRAIID is particularly interested in supporting projects which combat the negative impacts of the textile and apparel industry on people and the environment."

Interested organisations should visit www.traid.org.uk/callforproposals09.html for full details of how to apply for funding.
